WHAT RADICALISM DID HERE.

In nothing was the destructive spirit of Radicalism more fatally exhibited than towards education, whether our highest institution or the humblest schools were the

The University was the pride of our people, the most cherished of all our pos-A large majority of those who had wen renown in the service of the State whether apor the State or national theatre, had been trained there. As in public, so in private life, wherever the charm of lettered intercourse was felt and appreciated the obligation to the University was acknowledged. It was the gift of our Revolutionary sires. The Constitution which they ordained, contained the solemn injunction that it should be maintained, fostered, and extended. Thus, by every association which could appeal to the mind and heart, the University had taken deep root in the affections of our people. It had started from small beginnings, and had attained a very high pitch of prosperity: the number of its students at the outbreak of the war was nearly five hundred. There were other institutions of learning in other States which embraced a wider range of study, some which imparted an education better fitted for the duties of a Professor's Chair: there were none where the es sential branches of higher knowledge were better taught, none which better fitted men for a useful and honorable career in the active affairs of life. What made it dear to liberal and enlightened men, made it hateful to Radicalism. Radicalism regarded it with that rancor with which it regarded everything that lifts men above the lowest level of equality. Radicalism, therefore, marked it for its prey. Its professors, everywhere honored and beloved, were driven out upon the world, and men put into their chairs, the best of whom were not more than equal to a tutorship; the rest not more than equal to the headship of a village school. The stroke, for a time, was a most disastrous one. The light of science, which for more than half a century, had cast its radiance far and wide from the famed Hill, was eclipsed for long years; its venerable buildings were abandoned to the bat and the

Radicalism was not less fatal to our

Common Schools. Always loud in its professions of devotion to the interest of the people, it had above all signalized itself by its frequent, earnest, solemn protestations of devotion to this particular interest. It declared itself overflowing with the spirit of fraternity towards all classes; it declared its mission to be to uplift the lowly through the agency of education. If its professions were to be credited, it contemplated with grief, alike agonizing and unutterable, the wide-spread illiteracy of our people. No man who had not lost all faith in human veracity could, when listening to these professions, doubt that the Radical party-especially the representative men of that party-were prepared to make any sacrifice to banish it from the land. That party was in possession of all the powers and resources of the State from the summer of 1868 to or near the beginning of 1871. The legislation of that period will show the sincerity of their professions. The management of the property belonging to the school fund will be shown by a single example. A large part of the stock of the Cape Fear Navigation Company belonged to this fund. This property was sold under a special act, and the proceeds lost forever. The Constitution declared that this and all other property belonging to the common schools should be "sacredly observed as an irreducible fund, its income to be faithfully appropriated for establishing a system of common schools." But the mandate of the Constitution as to the fund itself was as little regarded as the purpose to which the fund was to be appropriated. Why this and other sales of the like kind were made cannot be told. It was deemed best, so far as the act shows, that the people should know nothing of the reasons which led to the sale. Nor do the acts authorizing the sale of stock in our railroad corporations-stock belonging to the same fund-throw any light upon the reasons for which those sales were made.

The regard in which Radicalism held the educational interest of the State was better illustrated somewhat later. The statesmen of that party, black and white, had protracted their legislative sessions far beyond any former precedent; in one instance several months. The compensation which they voted themselves was in proportion to their own estimate of the value of their services; and was modestly fixed at a sum considerably more than double that which, at a former day, MOREHEAD, GRAHAM, and men like them, had fixed for their own compensation. This heavy drain-along with a reckless expenditure in every way, to which there is room to allude only-had left our Treasury without a dollar available for current expenses. while large arrears were due to the members. There was, indeed, a large amount in the Treasury-about one hundred and sixty thousand dollars—but that belonged rally as one man to his side. They know tion of affairs. What an army of illiterto the school fund. Could that fund be that upon the hustings, in the legislative ates!

appropriated to their use? The case was halls, upon every arena where intellect and not without difficulties in their minds, education can have fair play, they have no difficulties which would have been insuperhope of promotion. Make the Executive again the centre of patronage, as under the able in the minds of any other than themselves. Thirdly and lastly, as to the people: It was known that those of their own party would ask no questions; no party ever had such a confiding constituency: as to the people outside of their party,

Radicalism had long since branded them

as disloyal, and even taken away the right of voting from a large proportion of them.

Upon a full consideration of the matter the way was clear. A conclusion so clear was quickly followed up by appropriate action.

At one swoop the whole fund was swept

The record of Radicalism has been nastily touched, and that only in certain of its aspects. No connected sketch has been attempted. The object has been to present it briefly in its relation to the white people of the South, their institutions, their society, and to show its animus. It is a dark record, but it would have been darker far if it had been traced in detail.

It is a record of violence, ruin and disgrace.

It hurled down our Constitution, and revolutionized our laws. It destroyed our State credit, and recklessly squandered its resources. It subverted our political system, and did its utmost to subvert our social system. It trampled upon every principle of civil liberty, and nullified every guarantee of personal liberty. It degraded our judiciary, and made it a bye-word and a hissing. It broke down our University, and made spoil of our Common School

Fund. It expelled men of capacity, virtue and qualifications from every station o honor and profit, and, as a rule, placed there men vile and ignorant, men burn ing with hate against us. Whatever was honored, respected, and trusted wherever civilization and enlightenment reigns, was proscribed here. It was passive, if it did not occupy a less venial position, when property was devastated by theft and fire

when life was the prey of every sort of violence; when innocent and helpless women were subjected to the brutalities of a race the nearest of all to brutes: it made war upon our race when vengeance was visited upon the perpetrators of these crimes. Such are a few items, and a few not for a moment that this is an idle ques be false to himself, false to his party of which he is the mouthpiece, if he did not seek to restore it. Apart from the fact that it commanded the warmest approval of his understanding, ambition and interest would alike prompt him to restore it.

The restoration of the Radical Con-consequence; for it would make his office

again the chief power in the State.

Does the world afford one example of a people who, of their own will, their backs to the smiter? Who willingly surrender up their great trusts to the spoiler? Who hasten to lick the feet of those who abase them? Will the people of North Carolina be the first to afford such an example? When we suffered under the humiliations, spoliations and oppressions of Radical rule before, we severely arraigned the tyranny which had imposed them upon us. When the evils which will follow in the train of its re-established rule are again upon us by our own act, what will be the verdict of the world upon a people so lost to every principle which should animate free men What would be the judgment which we would be constrained to pronounce upon ourselves? In the midst of our calami ties, the galling thought would rise up in the mind: It is our own doing. What, lastly, would be the judgment of the Radical party itself here? To whatever cry, disappointment, anger, misery, or despair might wring from us, we would hear in answer the bitter taunt, rendered yet more bitter by its justice and its truth,

Ye would be dupes and vietims, and ye are THE Republican organs say the "mis sion" of the Republican party is to "restore real Republican government to the Southern States." That is, the "mission" is to substitute Republican State governments for Democratic State governments in the South. The thieving carpet-bag governments of former years fully represented the spirit and substance of "real Republican government," and that sort of government will never be established in the South again. The "mission" of the Republican party is a dismal failure.

Receptions - Ovations - Speeches, &c., & TROY, August 18, 1880.-The rout rom Carthage to this place of historic name is one long to be remembered by the Governor and traveling party. Much of the road is quite sandy, and were it not for the beautiful pine forests (virgin timber), the monotony would be burdensome The carriage that brought us to this place will seldom, if ever, have in it so much solid Democracy. This he declined to do, giving as his reason that his plans for canvassing were not matured. I then published a list of appointments and invited the Judge to go with me. He accepted this invitation and has been canvassing with me up to this appointment, and I did not know until Saturday that he would not be here

o-day. Under these circumstances I do not recognize the right of any one to represent him; he ought to be here to represent himself. He has, after a consultation with him Executive Committee, voluntarily abandoned the joint canvass and gone off to himself in a distant part of the State.

Nothwithstanding all this, if you will

THE BECEPTION, PROCESSION, &C. At 11 o'clock, the Mount Gilead Han cock and Jarvis Club assembled in front of the Hotel. Gov. Jarvis was then formall received by Dr. J. G. Christian, Vice-Pres dent of the club, who said : In behalf of the Democratic party, I welcome you to Montgomery's classic hills, her beautiful valleys, and her teeming earth, and we pledge you the largest Democratic vote that has ever been cast in Montgomery county. W know that by the election of Hancock and Jarvis peace and harmony will reign supreme throughout one of the greatest nations the sun has ever shone upon, and the bloody chasm of sectional strife, that has so long yawned between the North and South, will be filed with harmony peace and good will to man, and we will erect upon it bonfires that will illuminate the highest mountain peaks, and we will burn upon its altars every bloody shirt that has ever waved between Maine and the golden shores of the Pacific. Gov. Jarvis thanked them very kindly for the warm welcome extended to him as the Chief Executive of the State, but would reserve any further remarks until they reached the stand where the address was headed by Gov. Jarvis, in a buggy driven by one of Montgomery's staunchest Democrats, Zebedee Russell, Esq., followed by the Mount Gillead Hancock and Jarvis Club, on horseback, and about one thousand of the yeomanry of Montgomery county on foot. Cheer after cheer rent the air as the procession moved forward to the arbor in front of the Academy. Arriving at the Academy, we found upwards of one hundred ladies had assembled to hear the discussion.

GOVERNOR JARVIS. who returned thanks for the enthusiastic reception he had received. He then for one and a half hours addressed the people in that easy and forcible style that he is wont to do. The words of truth as they fell from his lips seemed to be drank in with avidity by that large crowd of atten tive listeners, and applause long and loud would echo through the woods as he deal blow after blow upon the Duke of Mont-gomery and the Radical party, its pledges, extravagance and failures to do what they

It was a sad day for Radicalism in Montgomery when tempted a reply to Gov. Jarvis. Gov. Jarvis literally tore his flimsy arguments to shreds and achieved one of the greatest victories of the campaign, and the Democrats of old. Montgomery say that the county will be redeemed this year and Hancock and Jarvis will get a majority of the votes of the county. The cause of Democracy is certainly brightening.

After the speech of Gov. Jarvis was con cluded James T. Le Grand, in behalf of the ladies, presented the Governor with a beautiful bouquet of flowers, in a speech beautiful bouques of make, such as he alone can make.

They Fought Agin Him.

[Concord Sun.]

Last Saturday evening a crowd gathered around two politicians on the side walk under our sanctum window, who were discussing Hancock and Garfield. While the discussion was at its height, an old lady wearing a pair of heavy rimmed spectacles an old time lace bonnet that set on her head like a silver dollar and tied behind her neck, a muslin dress with figures of gourds all over it, punched her way through the crowd with her umbrella and got close up to the two wranglers. She couldn't stand still, but twitched about like she had an electric battery in her frock pocket. Everytime the Hancock man would bring down a point on Garfield, she would make a sweep with her umbrella and shout; "Hit him agin." Her enthusiasm was unbounded and after the wrangle was over between the two men, she turned to the crowd and informed them that she "had three sons who fit agin Hancock. Bill lost a leg a foughtin' of 'im and Jeems planted his left arm at Gettysburg, but darn if what's left of my boys don't vote for him, certain, strangers.

Lotta's Burglar.

It was unprecedented at Erlsham for the students to break out so late in the term. Still more unprecedented was it for a po-tent, grave and reverend senior to have any share in the mischief. Yet, only three nights before Commencement, the students "made things howl," and Tom Anstruther was head and front of the offending. They nailed up over the chapel-door the "To Providence and way stations," stole from the railroad. They serenaded obnoxious members of the faculty in terms anything but flattering. They built a large bonfire on the campus and indulged in promiscuous song-and-dance performance

In the midst of the uproar there was the ery of "Faculty! faculty!" followed by an instant hush. The students scattered in all directions. Anstruther as fast as anyfaster, indeed, when he found himself closely followed. His particular pursuer appeared to be one of the younger and more active of the professors, who quite caught the spirit of the chase. Tom found it impossible to shake him off. Was the valedictorian of the graduating class to be caught thus ignominiously?

An open basement-window gave him an inspiration. He sped past it; then, doub ling cleverly on his foe, sprang through it and laughed to hear his footsteps grow fainter in hot pursuit up the street. Up-stairs Lotta Desmond was brushing out her pretty brown hair, preparatory to retiring. On her daintily-frilled toilet-table, looking oddly out of place, lay Cousin Jim's revolver. There had been great many jokes about that revolver. Her uncle and cousin had solemnly in stalled Lotta as man of the house during their absence. Jim had reminded her of the exploits of brave Mrs. Brown and plucky Mrs. Peters, as recorded by the Daily Chronicle. The first of these ladies had, alone and unarmed, held a burglar captive until help came. The second, un der like circumstances, had completely routed two desperate villains.

And Lotta had demanded Jim's pistol and declared that she only longed for chance to emulate their heroism. And Jim had promised to watch the papers for a similar mention of daring Miss Des-

So Lotta smiled when her eyes fell the pistol, for as yet no opportunity for glory had come to her, and Jim would be home to-morrow.

Just then her aunt came into the room fancying, as she had fancied every night since her husband's departure, that she heard a noise, and would dear Lotta, who was so fearless, mind going downstairs to investigate?' So Lotta thrust her little bare feet into slippers, threw on a wrapper and sallied forth, pistol in hand. Aunt Lucy detained her with a last word-in case it should be any one, to "let her know immediately, immediately; but otherwise not to disturb her, as she was extremely fatigued." With a dim recollection that the dining room window had not been closed, the at once. The gas had been put out and ; miserable candle left burning. What Lot ta saw by its dim light was a tall young man, rather roughly clad. Alas! Tom, usually something of dandy, had that night donned his poorest array, his hair disordered, his clothes grimed with dust and soot, from which not even his face had escaped, coolly examining her uncle's silver. Spirit of Mrs. Brown and Mrs.—the other lady—inspire

"Drop that or I fire!" Tom turned with a start. What he saw was a pretty girl in a charming neglige, whose voice and hand both shook as she uttered this doughty threat, and in whose face a certain timid determination, a look of one frightened at her own daring, appealed to his sense of humor. But i would never do to laugh at her. Besides. that pistol in her uncertain, unfamiliar hand was no joke. So he said with due

"I surrender. But for heaven's sake put up that revolver! You are as likely to shoot yourself as me."

"Not at all," evidently nettled. perfectly accustomed to using it." Need it be said that this was a deliberate lie, attered with intent of striking terror to the bosom of the robber? For the same purpose Lotta continued to level her pistol and eye him with much outward severity and not a few inward tremors, thinking withal that your housebreaker is not the bold desperado he is painted. Still keeping watch over one is weary work, heigh-ho! Tom rapidly deermined to see the adventure through. Time enough to make his escape should she call for help or should any fresh com-plication arise. He hoped she was not oing to keep him standing all night. Presently he ventures to suggest that she could mount guard over him quite as well

Lotta assented gladly. Her burglar was quite a model, she thought. And why should she incumber herself longer with that unnecessary pistol, of which, she acknowledged to herself, she was much more afraid than was her prisoner? Accordingly she laid it carefully down within reach. Then, with what seemed to Tom a most amazing underrating of his strength, she announced her intention of holding him until assistance should arrive.

To him the situation was not without its charm. It does not often happen to any of us that a pretty girl will insist on sitting next us and holding our hands and that she was pretty, exceedingly pretty, Apstruther managed to satisfy himself in spite of the stingy light.

Once or twice he addressed a remark his fair captor, but she discouraged all attempt at conversation.

And so they sat in silence, while the candle burned low and finally went out, and the cold gray light of dawn crept into the room. Even this did not cause Lotta to change her position. And, looking curiously at her, the young man discovered that his stern guardian was asleep!

How long and dark were the lashes rest ng on the fair cheek, he thought, gasing down at the sweet, peaceful face framed in its wealth of nut-brown hair. Surely none of the young lady's ball dresses could set off her beauty as did that old blue wrapper.

Tom was strongly tempted, in his character of robber, to steal a kiss, but there was a certain odd chivalry in his composition that kept him from taking any advantage of her unconsciousness. He withdrew the whale as he espied Jonah.

The chill breath of early more ing made him shiver, although it was June He might as well make her comfortal before he went. He groped his way in the hall. On the hat stand lay a hear shawl. THE CIRCUS.—At last have the picture been spread upon the bill-boards and the small boy's heart is made glad, but from the crowds which gathered around them, one will see that they revive a spirit of curiosity or anxiety in the minds of some whose heads are sprinkled with gray. From the immense amount of paper put up and the general spirit of the press from abroad, Mr. Coup has charge of the most stupendous combination show ever put upon the road. The advance party travel in a special car belonging to the show, fitted up in elegant style, and which attracted much attention, many of our people visiting the depot just to look at this car. A prominent feature of this great show is that of lighting their canvas by means of electric light. This will no doubt be well worth the price of admission.

RALEIGH AND ITS SURROUNDINGS. Raleigh itself is a pleasant city and a pretty name, but among its noted localities, suburbs and additions one would think it a conglomeration of hard places. Among are Brooklyn, Oberlin, Slip Up, Hayti, Africa, Geranium Valley, Sleepy Hollow, Smoky Hollow, Pleasant Hill, Hell's Acre and a Half, Vinegar Hill, Louse's Level, Scuffletown, Cologne Avenue, New Raleigh, Croquet Lawn, Jack's Trap, Silver Tinged Valley, and how many others we do not know. These localities are mostly around the outskirts of the city and received their names either from some event connected with the location or from the ne-

THE HANDSOMEST DEMOCRAT.-Yeserday's mail brought in it a package addressed to "The Handsomest Hancock Man, Raleigh, N. C.," from the house of Dudley Baily, New York. When it was known that such a package had arrived, the reporters of the city papers, each in his turn, demanded the same, but without effect. In the afternoon the postmaster summoned all his assistants, clerks, mailcarriers, servants, &c., and the matter was carefully canvassed, and upon vote the package was further addressed to William Henry Harrison Carter, and placed in the Mayor's post office box. The badge is a handsome one and of a peculiar design. Ask Mr. Carter to show you the badge.

A NOVELTY.—Yesterday Mr. James Williamson called our attention to a curiosity in cotton growth which is we dare say something which but few cotton producers have witnessed. It was a cotton stalk fully five feet in height, the body of which was hard and solid as a black jack. But this or the like was even seen by many; the novelty in this case was that in the top branches of the cotton tree a bird has built its nest and has in it three eggs. Write it to the world that Wake county is growing cotton trees in which the birds build their nests. This unusually large and thrifty stalk was raised by Mr. Beverly Williamson of this county.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE JOHN KING. -At 1:40 p. m. yesterday, the remains of the late John King arrived from Asheville and were met at the depot by a committee from Wm. G. Hill Lodge of Masons and conducted to his late residence in East Raleigh. The funeral ceremonies will take place from the Second Presbyterian Church this morning at 10:30 o'clock, after which the Masonic ceremo nies will be conducted at the grave in Oakwood cemetery.

A REMARKABLE JURY .- In our Su perior Court yesterday was a jury composed of married men; six were from the city and six from the country. The deputy sheriff in charge was a married man and the jury was hung. All day they quar-relled and not till sundown did they put on an appearance of business, when the foreman addressed the jury stating that he was a married man and wanted to go home, each one in his turn making the same statement. They hung until 10 o'clock, when all were of one mind both as to a verdict and on going home.

PROMPTLY DONE.—In May last John D. McMillan was drowned at Penny's pond at a pic-nic. A short time before he took out an accident policy with W. P. Wetherell, Esq., for the Travellers' Accident Insurance Company. Yesterday Mr. Wetherell paid to Dr. W. G. McMillan, father of the deceased, a check for $1,000 -the full amount of the policy. This speaks well for the Travellers' Accident Insurance Company, and should commend it favorably to our people.

Dr. McMillan acknowledges the payment by the following letter:-

RALEIGH, N. C., August 21, 1880. Wm. P. Wetherell, Esq., Ag't Travellers' Insurance Co.

DEAR SIR:-Permit me, through you to tender my sincere thanks to the Tra vellers' Insurance Company for the prompt payment of $1,000, under a policy of that amount issued on the life of my son-John D. McMillan-who was drowned on the 6th of May last.

In the settlement of this claim, the Com pany has acted with great promptness and to my full and entire satisfaction. I most cordially recommend the "Travellers" to all, as a Company whose fair dealing and promptness I have tested and have not found wanting.

With best wishes for its success and Western North Carolina Bailroad.

[Special telegram to THE RALEIGH NEWS.] SALISBURY, N. C., Aug. 21, 1880.

The stockholders of the new Western North Carolina R. R. Company, composed of Mr. W. J. Best and others, assignees of his original associates, and representing a capital abundantly sufficient to complete the work, met at Salisbury to-day and for-mally organized the Company in North Carolina. This step was taken to remove all question as to the legality of the former organization in the city of New York.

The directors named at the meeting in New York were elected at this meeting. to-wit: Messrs. W. E. Anderson, T. M. Logan, A. B. Andrews, F. F. Millar, A. C. Avery, John Hoey, W. T. Dortch, Robt. B. Vance, and W. J. Best, President. Five directors are from North Carolina and four are non-residents.

The directors met immediately after and took the usual steps to perfect their organization and frame by-laws for their government, for which purposes committees were appointed.

It appeared that the amount of money necessary to pay off the floating debt had been paid over to the treasurer, that iron had been bought, and by the terms of the contract was to be shipped about this time sufficient to lay the track to the Asheville depot and on the Newton branch, and to repair the track along the entire line.

The number of convicts now employed on the road according to the report of the engineer is only 380, including a number of women and disabled men. The peni tentiary board will increase the number to 500 by the first of September. Quarters will be built forthwith on the Ducktown line beyond the Junction, near Asheville, and a force put to work. An additional force of hired laborer will very soon be placed on the Western end of the French Broad line.

The new company is composed of me of large capital and will very soon give an earnest of good faith by the vigorous prosecution of the work on both lines.

Colonel John N. Staples was nominated for the Senate. Messrs. K. S. Ragsdale and D. G. Neeley were nominated for the House of

held in Guilford county. JUSTICE AND MUSCLE.—In one of our Justice's Courts, yesterday, J. T. Davis swore out a peace warrant against one J. P. Smith, and the case came on for trial, during which the Justice was satisfied that it was a frivolous, if not a malicious prosecution, and, therefore, dismissed the warrant at the complainant's cost, at which counsel took exceptions. Some time after the said counsel came in asked to take an appeal, when the Justice said that no notice of appeal had been given, and he had disposed of the papers properly. Counsel intimated that the Court knew that taking exceptions meant an appeal. Justice denied. Counsel further intimated that Justice lied. Then 'Squire Barbee intimated that the time had come when that Court would necessarily resort to muscle to maintain its dignity and dispense justice. Counsel qualified his remarks by convincing the Court that it had misunderstood his position, or that he had misconstrued the Court's meaning, or that he did not mean to have the Court think that counsel was mean enough to bemean the Court, or something to that effect; but 'Squire Barbee told all that whenever it became necessary, he was ready to apply nusele to maintain his rights in his own court, and to make counsel respect him as

Col. Miles has made a big haul of Indians. He telegraphed on Friday from Fort Keogh, Montana, that eight hundred and thirty hostile Sioux had come in and surrendered, and that one thousand more were on their way. These are the Indians who some time since fled with Sitting Bull across the Canadian border. They will be disarmed and dismounted and eventually turned over to the Interior Department for settlement on some reservation of the Missouri river. Flirting is sometimes fatal. At New Orleans on Friday Edwin C. Mix, Jr., aged 32, was killed by three Derance brothers-Ferdinand, Armand and Henri. The Derances, after being imprisoned, declared that Mix had flirted with their young sister. Although warned, he had not desisted, but continued to follow the young lady. Mix leaves a wife and a General Grimes' Assassination.

[From THE NEWS' Special Reporter.] WASHINGTON, N. C., Aug. 19, 1880. It is an almost interminable job to get here and as hard to get news away from here. Leaving Raleigh Tuesday morning I only got here last night, and at Tarboro, only fifty miles from here, nothing definite was known of the horrible murder which has cast so deep a gloom over the entire State. Even here the air was thick with flying rumors, and it has only been today that I have been enabled to learn with certainty any of the details of the horrible

THE SCENE OF THE ASSASSINATION. The place where General Grimes was shot is about six miles from here on the Greenville road, in a lonely spot where a little streamlet called Bear Creek crosses the road. Approaching it from this town, about a quarter of a mile from the spot is a log cabin, and just at the top of a hill about two hundred yards from the scene of the shooting is a log school house. The road just at the place, is muddy and bad and must be driven over slowly. Just across the run of the creek a twin cypress stands within eight feet of the road and behind this or rather between the trunks the assassin stood awaiting his victim. His plans were well laid. He had cut and broken away the twigs so that he had an uninterrupted view of the road while it was impossible that he could have been seen by any one riding or driving along the road. It is a beautiful spot and when I visited it this morning the leaves nodded and murmured in the soft August breeze, as if they had never looked upon a scene of which the next generation will speak with bated breath. It was on this spot that the gallant soldier and noble citizen was cut off.

HIS VISIT TO WASHINGTON. Gen. Grimes had attended the Convention in Washington last Saturday, and every one with whom I have talked speaks of the peculiarly cheerful mood in which he was during the day. He dined at the Adams Hotel at 4 o'clock; at six Major Sparrow received a note from him, the last his hand ever wrote; this note Maj. Sparrow has sent to Mrs. Grimes. These, I know, are all small details, but nothing connected with the death of Gen. Grimes can now be without interest. At 6:30 the General left town.

A TRUE HERO In the buggy with him was a boy of thir teen years of age named

FENNER BRYAN SATTERTHWAITE. the bravest boy I have ever seen-a boy who was worthy to ride with Grimes. What followed I will let the young hero tell in his own language. He says :

"After we left town we drove at a good gait, but I can't tell what time it was when the General was shot; only I know it was between sundown and dark, and was light enough to tell a man a hundred yards off. He didn't stop to water the horses, but they were walking and were just coming out of the water when the gun went off It was from the left of the road. I can't soon as I heard the report I heard Gen. Grimes say, 'What are you doing in there?' He then said, 'I'm shot.' I said, 'General, do you think you are going to die? and he said, 'I think I am.' He then laid his head on the back of the seat, and gradually his body sunk down in the foot of the buggy with the head resting on the seat. The horses jumped when the gun fired and started up the hill, but I don't think they wanted to run away. Gen. Grimes did not drop the reins, but saw he'd lost his strength and took them out of his hands. I don't know whether he or I stopped the horses; they were jumping when I took the reins. I drove on up to John Murphy Carrow's he was not at home; a man named Luke Bates came out; one of Gen. Grimes' feet had fallen out of the buggy; Bates helped me put it back; Gen. Grimes was breathing then: I asked Bates to go with me and help me, but he said he was sick and could not.

I don't know when Gen. Grimes died; I know he was breathing once after I left Carrow's; I overtook Henry Allen just at the end of the lane and asked him if the General was dead and he said he was; I drove on down the lane and just before I got to the gate I met a negro; I asked him to turn back and open the gate, but he wouldn't do it; I got down, opened the gate, led the horses through and then got up again and drove on up to the house (J. B. Stickney's); I called Unele Joe out and he got in the buggy and drove over to Gen. Grimes'."

This was the narrative to me by the boy almost without questioning, and in its very simplicity it gives assurance of accuracy.

Mr. Stickney says that when he "got in the buggy the General's hands were cold but the body was still warm; I drove it over to his house as soon as I could; his two oldest boys were at my house when Bryan drove up with their father's body; I started them on ahead to break the news to their mother, and told the younger a boy twelve years old to ride by Joe Laughinghouse's and tell him to come over; we found that only one shot had taken effect although six had struck the buggy; this shot a medical examination showed had struck the left arm just below the point of the shoulder; it passed through the arm and entering the body ranging slightly unward had cut the subclavian artery; the bleeding was all internal, not a thimble full of blood showed on the outside; General Grimes always rode stooping slightly forward; he carried a small pillow in the buggy on which he rested his back; the bulk of the charge passed in front of him. The next day I went down with a party and examined the place. The murderer entered from the road along which Grimes was riding, as I found the place where a man had forced his way through the undergrowth. We found no traces on the spot, but following the run of the creek up for about 200 yards I found a single track where a man had left the stream. We tried to follow this track but it went into the pine woods and we could follow it no further."

These two statements give a clear, suc-cinct and I am satisfied accurate account of the manner in which the hero of a hundred battles met death from the stray shot of an ambushed assassin.

people in the neighborhood tell me there was the largest crowd of white and colored people in attendance that has ever been seen. Immediately behind the hearse was led the General's horse, old Warren," the horse that was shot under him at Cold Harbor and saved his life at Sailor's (or Sailan) Creek. The old horse is now 26 years old but is as fat as an dderman. On his saddle were tied the

General's boots, his sword, the blade of which was shot off at Chancellorsville, and his bullet-riddled uniform coat.

A KIND MASTER AND FRIEND. I have specially noticed the condition of this horse, because it is an index to his master's character. For years he has been worthless, but he has always been the object of tenderest care. The great heart which in the roar of battle beat calmly as a sleeping infant's, never forgot a friend. Who had once gained his friendship had a friend who never wearied in good works.

COLD CALCULATION OF THE ASSASSIN. Will the assassin ever be discovered? fear not. The whole affair was arranged with a coolness that seems to defy detection. Every detail was evidently planned and arranged beforehand, and so far every clew has been run to earth without result. I hope to-morrow to learn something of new interest. W. P. B.

What North Carolinians are Doing.

The Charlotte Observer says that on the 3d inst. Prof. J. F. Latimer, of Davidson College, successfully passed all the examinations necessary to attain the degree of Doctor of Philosophy at the University of Leipsic, Germany, and had this degree conferred upon him by the Procancellar of the University. His examiners were Professors Heirvze, Curtius and Voigt, who with their congratulations, paid him high compliments for passing his examinations in so distinguished a manner. It was not Dr. Latimer's purpose at first to present himself before the board until the end of the year, but by his energy and his already fine attainments he accomplished his purpose in one-third of the expected and usual time. It was Prof. Latimer's intention when he left to remain in Germany until the 1st of January, when he expected to resume his position as Professor of Greek and German in Davidson College. Gradually Davidson College, through its teachers and pupils, is becoming recognized as among the leading institutions of its kind in the Southern States.

The Danbury Reporter has heard from the hail storm "last Thursday for at least forty miles, from Mt. Airy in Surry county through Stokes to the upper edge of Rockingham county. The damage to crops where heard from is very great; many tobacco crops in this part of the county are entirely ruined, in some large fields there is scarcely anything left but the naked stalks. Some farmers have cut the stalks off, hoping to get some tobacco from a sucker. We think the corn crop is injured badly in places, the fodder is in shreds, some ears were pelted off the stalks by the tell where the man was standing when he shot, and I can't exactly say where the buggy was in reference to the cypress. As to perfection."

Mr J. G. Shannonhouse exhibited at the Charlotte Observer office on Friday a pair of blankets manufactured by Messrs. Gwyn and Chatham, at Elkin in this State, which in usefulness and durability are equal to any made elsewhere. The sheep that made the wool and the wool that made the blankets and the blankets themselves are all North Carolina productions. The firm is manufacturing cashmeres for gentlemen's wear and the people of that region are becoming entirely independent, being able to exchange the wool for the cloth on the spot, and two miles distant to obtain cotton cloth suitable for all the purposes of ordinary wear.

The Newton Enterprise says that "Mr. Andrew Hoyle Shuford, aged about 65 years, died in Hickory on the 17th, after an illness of several months. Mr. Shuford was well known in this section and commanded the respect and confidence of all who knew him. He was several times elected sheriff of this county in the antebellum days and was a member of the Legislature at the time the North Carolina Railroad was chartered."

The Greensboro Patriot says that "the preliminary line of the Cape Fear and Yad-kin Valley Railroad, up the Yadkin Valley, will be commenced in a few days. Col. L. C. Jones, chief engineer, and Dr. Nereus Mendenhall, one of his assistants, are now preparing to examine the line and make an instrumental survey as soon as possible.'

"We have living near Chapel Hill, says the Ledger, a hard-working colored man. We refer to Sam Stack Purefoy. Sam made this year 329½ bushels of wheat, expects to make 150 barrels of corn, and has 15 acres in cotton. Sam was the property of Rev. George W. Purefoy."

The Chapel Hill Ledger says that the grading of the University railroad is nearly done and the track will be ironed immedi ately after completion.

WAIFS:-A scientific man will study all day over a poor little worm's work, when he might get at the hole thing in a nutshell by eating a few chinquepins.

A four-year-old Sunday-school girl did the best she could with a question that was asked of the infant class. Said the teacher: "And it came to pass when King Heze-kiah heard it, that he rent his clothes." Now, what does that mean, children, 'he rent his clothes?" Up went a little hand. "Well, if you know, tell us." "Please, ma'am," said the child timidly, "I spose he hired 'em out."

The colored people of Little Rock are divided as to the needs of the soil. One congregation has been praying for rain, while the other asked for continued sunshine. The minister of the wet district sent the following note to the people of the dry: "You folks oughter be ashamed of yourselves. This cross cut prayin' is enough to get the Lord so bothered that he don't know what to do." Cousin Emily (whose young man sits opposite in dreamy contemplation of his inamorata): "Do you like your new doll, Bertha?" Bertha: "Et, tuzzin Em'ly; I loves it weal lots, all but one fing." Cousin Emily: "Why, what is that, Bertha?" Bertha: "Dolly's hair will come off; but, tuzzin Em'ly, she isn't a truly lred battles met death from the stray shot of an ambushed assassin.

The Convict and the Kitchen Maid.

[Reidsville Times.] John Lover, a negro convict who worked is time out on the Milton and Sutherlin Narrow Gauge Railroad, fell in love while grading the road, near Milton, with Nelsing Hunt, a mulatto woman raised and owned by Mr. Taz Hunt, who has been hithful to the family since the war, and has always declared she would remain with her master and mistress as long as they lived. But she snubbed John Lover after he got free, and for this he took revenge last Saturday night. As Nelsina was cooking in Mr. Hunt's kitchen, the ex-convict crept in and asked her for a piece of bread. She re-tused to give it, and he jerked a pistol from his breast and began firing at her.

She ran screaming from the kitchen and he in pursuit at every shot. He fired three times and doubtless would have killed her, but Mr. Hunt ran out and seized him. A warrant was sent for to Milton and he was handcuffed and imprisoned. The woman was badly shot in the arm, so badly that it may have to be amputated. John was a hard-working convict, always lively and singing at his work, but he was then in service for having stabbed a man in a difficulty.

The daily increasing use of Olive Oll as an article of food, is attracting public attention more and more to the necessity of caution in buying, so as to get a pure and genuine article. The advertisement of Mr. E. J. Hardin in to-day's paper, advertising the famous "Francesconi" brand of Oil, imported direct in hermetically sealed cans, and bottled here by himself, is worth the attention of all who like salads and salad oil.

Special Announcement.
